Chartis, a comprehensive healthcare advisory firm, today announced that Steve Prosser recently joined the firm as a Principal in the Strategy practice. His 25 years of management consulting and healthcare industry experience spans clinical operations, revenue management, and network management across health systems and payer domains.

"I'm excited to welcome Steve to our Strategy Practice," said Cindy Lee, Co-Leader of the Strategy practice at Chartis. "His ability to bring innovative, value-based solutions to today's toughest healthcare challenges will help providers and health systems navigate change and secure their place in the market."

Prior to joining Chartis, Prosser served as a Director at Guidehouse where he advised leading health systems, large multi-state physician groups, accountable care organizations, and clinically integrated networks. During his tenure, he focused on revenue management integration, managed care strategy, and negotiation assistance. In addition, he helped organizations reorganize and modernize their managed care functions to bring them into alignment with contemporary challenges.

Prosser also previously worked at Medica, a regional health plan located in the upper Midwest. In this capacity, he expanded fee-for-value contracts across the plan's network, bending the cost curve and assisting in impacting the cost of care in the markets served. Prior to Medica, he served in M Health Fairview's Revenue Management department where he was integral to the design, negotiation, and execution of M Health Fairview's first ever fee-for-value contract.

Prosser has been a featured speaker at various annual state hospital association conferences. Additionally, he was nominated by Medica to pursue, and continues to hold, the American Health Insurance Plans Certified Health Insurance Executive designation.

Prosser earned his Bachelor of Arts in healthcare administration from Concordia College in Moorhead, MN.
