Chartis, a leading healthcare advisory firm, today announced that Jeremy Sherman has joined the firm as a Partner in Financial Transformation. Sherman brings more than 15 years of experience partnering with and delivering strategic and technology solutions to healthcare provider and healthcare services companies.

“We are very excited to have Jeremy join the team,” said Kevin Ormand, Chartis Managing Partner and Leader, Financial Transformation. “His proven track record driving innovative solutions that create sustainable financial results and improve the customer financial experience will help both Chartis and our clients achieve their goal of making healthcare better.”

Focused on revenue cycle transformation, Sherman will work closely with client executives to design operating models that support strategic priorities, maximize technology investments, and enable the realization of full revenue potential.

Before joining Chartis, Sherman served as the Executive Vice President of Growth at Janus Heath, a revenue cycle software as a service firm. Prior to that he held numerous executive-level roles at Huron Consulting Group.

Sherman received his Bachelor of Business Administration, Management, and Marketing from the University of Wisconsin – Madison.
