Chartis, a leading healthcare advisory firm, today announced that John Capalbo has joined the firm as a Strategic Transformation Partner. He brings over 18 years of experience developing actionable, data-driven strategies that help academic and community health systems, provider organizations, payers, provider-sponsored health plans, and cancer center clients seize long-term strategic opportunities, engage in collaborative partnerships, and improve operations.

“We are excited to have John join our growing team,” said Eric Mayeda, Chartis Managing Partner and Leader, Strategic Transformation. “His extensive business performance improvement capabilities, coupled with his deep higher education healthcare strategy experience, will help his clients and our teams transform healthcare and improve how care is delivered.”

In his new role, Capalbo will work closely with organizations across the entire healthcare ecosystem to develop innovative solutions that will help clients shape a future that finds strengths in their strategic challenges. His expertise spans enterprise strategy; affiliations and partnerships; service-line growth; academic, research, and clinical alignment; footprint optimization; and oncology strategy.

Capalbo spent the last eight years at PwC Strategy& as a Director of Health Industries and Academic Medical Center Strategy. Prior to that, he served as an Associate Director of Business Operations and Strategy at NYU Rory Meyers College of Nursing.

Capalbo has a Bachelor of Arts in English and Communications from the University of Pennsylvania. He received an MBA from the Leonard N. Stern School of Business at New York University, where he earned the Dean’s Award for Outstanding Scholarship.
