Chartis, a leading healthcare advisory firm, today announced that Alan Trimakas has joined the firm as a Strategic Transformation Partner. He brings more than 14 years of experience delivering transformational strategies to drive market growth and operational excellence for healthcare organizations.

“We are thrilled to have Alan join our team,” said Cindy Lee, Chief Strategy Officer and Leader, Strategic Transformation. “His proven track record of helping clients drive innovative solutions and achieve strategic growth objectives align with Chartis’ longstanding commitment to reshape healthcare for the better.”

In his new role, Trimakas will work closely with leaders at national and regional health systems, academic medical centers, and physician enterprises to help them navigate market disruption, strengthen financial sustainability, and expand access to high-quality care. His focus will include enterprise strategy, new market entry, service line growth, and payer-provider alignment—helping organizations translate their strategic vision into actionable, measurable outcomes. Trimakas will also lead engagements that support strategic investments and partnerships, ensuring that clients are positioned for long-term success in an evolving healthcare landscape.

Prior to joining Chartis, Trimakas served as a Principal at BDC Advisors, where he worked closely with senior healthcare executives to shape organizational strategy, enhance financial and operational performance, and foster sustainable growth. He also spent six years at KPMG leading engagements focused on implementing strategic initiatives at federal health and life sciences agencies.

Trimakas holds a Bachelor of Science in Commerce from the University of Virginia and an MBA from the University of Florida’s Hough School of Business.
